What is piffle?

Have you Forded yet?

Better have Huerta salute the flag now while he's in the toils.

Sticking plaster covers a multitude of skins.

Swat the fellow who spits in the waste basket.

Bryan can now go back to chaufauquawking.

Have you a little hen (and chickens at your home scratching up the garden?

Since it's got at it, the weather man says now it will probably rain.

"Beyond the Alps lies Italy," while the balance of us are content to lie at home.

The bad thing about Sunday is the bad feeling carried over for about half the next week.

Some folks never shut up, and there are other violations of the night hour law.

A bottle of whiskey sold as a "bargain" contains as much poison.

"What keeps women in the house?" asks an exchange. Lots of them are kept there because they "haven't a thing to wear."

The Montgomery whiskey house are evading the law by advertising "bargains" instead of whiskey.

There is said to be a movement started to have Frank pardoned. This will give front page stories for all the papers except those published in Atlanta.

"The conscience makes cowards of us all," yet some newspapers would have us believe Governor Slaton's conscience made him a very brave man when he commuted Frank's sentence.

The "hand-picked" investigating committee refused to make charges to Mister Ohneel's charge of spying upon him. That is, they are just scared, that's all.

The Pope may move his place of residence away from the Vatican at Rome. "The Pope can do no wrong," and he also don't want to be taken for the wrong man in case the enemy were to pay Rome a visit.

Our Right to the Sea.

New York World.

In plain words, the British memorandum in relation to the lawless interference with our ships and cargoes is an impudent persistence in wrong-doing. Nobody is more conscious of this offense than the members of the British Ministry, for in answering us now with sophistry and falsehood they reverse the record of their own Government in like cases of many years.

When the United States under international law has rights clearly established, what can be more intolerable than to have a professed friend say that those rights will be invaded only with minimum of inconvenience? What can be more insolent than to be assured by such a friend that on interrupting our lawful trade with neutrals it will graciously refrain from violence or confiscation? Is there any outrage that one nation can inflict upon another at peace more humiliating than to subject its legitimate commerce to a piratical embargo?

No matter how many diplomatic notes may be written or how cleverly or falsely they may evade the real issue, the British Government cannot justify the seizure of neutral ships laden with non-contraband goods bound from one neutral port to another. International law recognizes and defines blockades, but it specifically declares that no blockade shall be operative against nations at peace.

The British blockade of Germany is in fact a blockade of Holland, of Denmark, of Sweden, and of Norway. We have made no complaint as yet against the legality of the so-called British Blockade of Germany, although it is known that it is maintained at long range, and there is not even a pretense that it is effective in the Baltic.

It is because the British blockade of Germany is spurious that these troubles have arisen. It is not a true blockade of Germany. It is more particularly an embargo upon the United States. The much-vaunted British sea-power does not close the ports of Germany. It is attempting to accomplish that purpose in an easier way by denying to the American people the freedom of the seas. It undertakes to deal with the commerce of the great Republic precisely as it does with that of the four small and intimidated states of Europe. It offers to pay, but it never otherwise acknowledges a wrong.

We have other injuries in the Old World that must be redressed, but to most Americans this one, being in the family, so to speak, and reviving a quarrel once settled, as we thought, for all time, may as well be attended to first. We went to war with Great Britain a century ago for a cause no more grievous.

If the United States cannot command respect in Great Britain, what reason have we to hope for consideration in Germany?

Mister Ohneel has again grown fretful and accuses the "hand-picked" investigating committee of spying on him. Maybe they are trying to find where he mislaid the "safe and sane" part of his administration.

The Pope may move his place of residence away from the Vatican at Rome. "The Pope can do no wrong," and he also don't want to be taken for the wrong man in case the enemy were to pay Rome a visit.

Sweet Dreams Wages Its Victory Against Ravages Of Malarial Mosquitoes

In the conquest of the malarial mosquito, justly called the rattle-snake of the air, no weapon is more convenient, more efficient or more reasonable than Sweet Dreams, and its use is advised for your own welfare.

Sweet Dreams is the most highly recommended of all preparations for keeping mosquitoes away. To learn of its most remarkable virtues, refuse all substitutes. Big bottles at big drug stores, 15 cents.

A jury in Montgomery awarded the state 1 cent in its suit against the Montgomery Savings bank for $110,000 taken away by Theo Lacy. Perhaps when the pine box is located and it is ascertained how old Ann is, and the man who struck Billy Patterson is found, the state may recover the little balance of $100,999.99.

"TIZ" FOR ACHING, SORE, TIRED FEET

Good-bye sore feet, burning feet, swollen feet, sweaty feet, smelling feet, tired feet.

Good-bye corns, callouses, bunions and raw spots. No more shoe tightness, no more dimpling with pain or drawing up your face in agony. "TIZ" is magical, acts right off. "TIZ" draws out all the poisonous excretions which pull up the feet. Use "TIZ" and forget your foot misery. Ah! how comfortable your feet feel. Get a 25 cent box of "TIZ" now at any drug or department store. Don't suffer. Have good feet, glad feet, feet that never swell, never hurt, never get tired. A year's foot comfort guaranteed or money refunded.

A REPEATER.

Wife—What shall I give Bella for a wedding present?
Husband—Oh, same as we gave her the other times—Judge.

HERE'S PROBLEM IN SAVING.

One dollar at five per cent compound interest for 1,000 years would amount to 104 quintillion, 69 quadrillion, 620 trillion, 917 billion, 985 million, 83 thousand, 392 dollars $104,069,620,917,985,083,392. This is the result obtained by Edwin Soule, a freshman in the Newport high school, says a Marysville (Pa.) dispatch to the Philadelphia North American.

Assistant Principal G. W. Barnitz of the school wagged young Soule that he could not solve the problem. Soule worked until midnight one night, consuming two tablets and four pencils. He received his dollar.

ANTISTRENUOUS.

Askitt—I say, old man, how did you happen to marry a widow?
Easyun—Well, you see, I did my courting as I do everything else—along the line of least resistance.

A FULL VIEW.

Biz—I wonder why they have those big mirrors in saloons?
Dix—To enable a man to get a full view of himself, I suppose.

VALUES IN MAINE.

The valuation of Maine increased in 1914 by the substantial sum of $9,503,698. There was an increase of $741,071 in the value of live stock; and an increase of $695,391 in the value of automobiles. The total valuation of automobiles was $4,047,516; live stock, $17,981,690. The total valuation for the state is $439,528,198. This is divided among the population would give every one of the 742,371 inhabitants $592.50 each.

NEW WAGON NOT NEEDED.

In one West Virginia town it is reported they ordered a new automobile police patrol just before the new liquor law went into effect. It was not delivered for some weeks and after seeing the result of the new law they cancelled the order, saying that the old horse-drawn vehicle could do all the work necessary.

WHEN THE LID IS ON.

In a "dry" town only a criminal can sell booze, and only a sneak can buy it.

GOOD LESSON FOR MICHAEL.

Disobliging Coachman Got a Merited Rebuke From His Thoughtful Employer.

The late Mr. H. B. Claffin, who was one of the great merchants of the last generation, lived for many years at Kingsbridge, one of the suburbs of New York. It was his whim to have each morning before breakfast a drink of cold water fresh from a spring near the house.

One very rainy morning the pitcher was not in its usual place, and he asked the waitress why it was missing.

"Why, Mr. Claffin," she said, "it was raining so hard and is so muddy that I was afraid if I went after the water I should be too soiled to wait on the table. I asked Michael to get it for me, but he said it was his business to look after the horses and carriages, not to run errands."

"Oh!" said Mr. Claffin thoughtfully. "Perhaps he is right, Ella. Please tell him I want the victoria." Ten minutes later, with much tramping of hoofs and clanging of bits, the carriage drew up at the door, with Michael on the box in his rubber coat and hat cover.

"Come, Ella," said Mr. Claffin, "get your pitcher," and taking her by the arm, he walked down the front steps and helped her into the carriage.

"Michael," said he, "drive Ella to the spring and back, so she can get me some water without muddying herself."

Ever after Michael used to fill the pitcher on rainy mornings without even waiting to be asked.

MISUNDERSTOOD.

"Too bad about Jack. My husband said he was always a friend in need."

"Yes, always."

ITCHING ECZEMA IS DRIED RIGHT UP WITH SULPHUR

Use like cold cream to subdue irritation and clear the skin.

Any breaking out or irritation on the face, arms, legs and body when accompanied by itching, or when the skin is dry and feverish, can be readily overcome by applying a little cold sulphur, says a noted dermatologist.

He informs us that cold sulphur instantly allays the angry itching and irritation, and soothes and heals the Eczema right up leaving the skin clear and smooth. Cold sulphur has occupied a secure position for many years in the treatment of cutaneous disorders because of its place in treating the irritable and inflammatory skin affections. While not always establishing a permanent cure it never fails to subdue the itching irritation and drive the Eczema away and it is often years later before any eruption again appears.

Those troubled should obtain from any druggist an ounce of cold sulphur, which is applied to the affected parts in the same manner as an ordinary cold cream. It isn't unpleasant and the prompt relief afforded, particularly in itching Eczema, proves very welcome.

Millionaires Are Trowned

In Fastest Game Played Here This Season Dothan Defeats Valdosta 2 to 1.—Hall Pitches Excellent Game.

By playing air tight baseball, and with Pitcher George Hall going in grand form, Dothan defeated the Valdosta Millionaires yesterday afternoon, 2 to 1, in the fastest game played here this year. Time: One hour and seventeen minutes.

The Millionaires scored in the third inning. Ery was up and hit over Reidy's head for two bases. E. Schwartz hunted to Hall, who tried for Ery at third, and both were safe. Otto-Jordan singled to left, scoring Ery, and right there the scoring stopped, although nobody was out. McMillan advanced both base runners by a sacrifice, and George Hall struck out Bates and B. Schwartz this retiring the side.

Paschal singled to center in the fifth, but was forced out at second on Chambers hit to pitcher. Chambers moved to second on Price's single to left. Spitznagle singled to left and Chambers scored when Dickerson let the ball get by.

The winning run was put over in the eighth by Reidy, who hit a hot grounder to Schwartz at short, who fumbled the ball, then threw wild to first, Reidy going to second. Burruss sacrificed Reidy to third. The squeeze play was then worked, with success. Heck hunted to pitcher, and Reidy scored on the throw to first. Reidy had secured a good lead and was almost at home when Heck hit the ball.

Both pitchers were working wonderfully. Hall struck out nine batters, allowed four hits, and one base on balls, while Ery gave seven hits, struck out one and walked one.

POET OF NEW ENGLAND

Robert Frost is Called by the Critics a Star of Exceptional Magnitude.

A poet star of exceptional magnitude has risen for New England, says the American Review of Reviews. Yet it was in old England that it emerged from a misty horizon, there to be recognized for what it was. The book which has brought to its author this measure of fame bears the title, as felicitous as significant, "North of Boston."

The poet is Robert Frost, born in San Francisco of a New England father and a Scotch mother, March 26, 1875. The elder Frost was then a newspaper editor in the Pacific metropolis and was prominent in local politics. He went thither from Lawrence, in Massachusetts; he died when the boy was eleven years old, and the family returned to their old home.

His secondary schooling over, Robert Frost went to Dartmouth college for a while. Not finding what he felt he wanted, he turned to Harvard, there to be no better satisfied. This breaking away from educational opportunity made the impression among family connections of never-do-well inclinations, correspondingly impairing material prospects that otherwise would have been bright for him. But his was one of the natures that must grow in their own way if they are not to break. His studies away from academic bonds appear to have given him as much as he had gathered within. Altogether, he managed to assimilate what he needed. His bent was toward psychology, and its fruit is discernible in his poetry.

MARVEL OF BRUNSWICK

Bransburg, the capital of Brunswick, is a small town of about 100 people.

Bransburg, the capital of Brunswick, is a small town of about 100 people. It is a small town of about 100 people. It is a small town of about 100 people. It is a small town of about 100 people.

On a platform above are admirable figures representing the four ages of man. At the first quarter of an hour a child strikes the bell with a hammer, a youth in the garb of a knight strikes it with an arrow at the half-hour, at the third quarter a warrior strikes it with his sword, and at the fourth quarter an old man strikes it with his crutch. A figure of death appears and strikes the bell hour with a bone.

On the highest platform is a natural sized figure of Christ, and when death strikes the bell at noon the twelve apostles pass before the feet of their Master, bowing as they do so. As Peter passes a large rock perched at one side flips his wings, ruffles his neck and gives them time a loud crow.

COUNTRY'S EXCESS OF MALES

In the United States there is a surplus of the male sex in the rural areas.

In the United States as a whole the number of males is 1,000,000 in excess of the number of females, the ratio being 100 males to 99 females. In most European countries a reverse situation prevails. In England and Wales the number of males to 100 females is only 98.7; in France, 98.7; in the German empire, 97.5; in Italy, 96.3, and in Russia, 95.5.

The excess of males in the United States is chiefly due to immigration, a much larger percentage of the immigrants being males than females. In 1907, for example, out of a total immigration of 1,200,000 only 355,373 were females.

Among the Irish born, however, the females outnumber the males in a ratio of 100 to 93.4, the explanation being the large number of Irish girls who come to the United States to engage in domestic work.

AIDS TO HAPPINESS

Bacon—That neighbor of yours tried to cut a wide swath, didn't he?

Egbert—Yes, but he failed. He was too narrow.

THE TREATMENT.

"What are you now doing for the patient, Mrs. Galley?"

"Why, that fool doctor ordered us to give her epidemic interjections."

CONSOLATION.

"They say men of broken hearts longer than others."

"Oh, don't worry. I guess that's true."

The Old Paths--And The New Path Taken By The Frank Case

By THOMAS WATSON in The Jeffersonian.

It came to pass, in the olden days, that the Lord God of Hosts raised up men among the people, men who spoke as never men spoke before--men whose tongues were tipped with celestial fire, and whose winged words have flown on and on, until this poor scroll shall shrivel at the last Day, and Time shall merge into Eternity.

And one of these men--marked then, and unheeded now--said to the Israelites:

"Thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel, Amend your ways and your doings. Trust ye not in lying words, For if ye thoroughly amend your ways and your doings; if ye thoroughly execute judgment between a man and his neighbour; if ye oppress not the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow, and shed not innocent blood in this place, neither walk after other gods to your hurt; then will I cause you to dwell in this place, in the land that I gave to your fathers for ever and ever. Behold, ye trust lying words. Ye steal, murder and commit adultery. . . . Is this house which is called in my name become a den of robbers?" (Jer. vii. 1-12.)

And again he said:

"This people hath a revolting and rebellious heart; they are revolted and gone. Neither say they in their heart, Let us now fear the Lord our God, that giveth rain, both the former and the latter, in his season: He reserveth unto us the appointments of the harvest. Your iniquities have turned away these things, and your sins have withholden good things from you. For among My people are found wicked men; they lay wait as he that setteth snares; they set a trap, they catch men. As a cage is full of birds, so are their houses full of deceit; therefore they are become great, and waxen rich. They are waxen fat, they shine; yea, they overpass the deeds of the wicked; they judge not the cause, the cause of the fatherless, yet they prosper; and the right of the needy do they not judge. Shall I not visit for these things? saith the Lord: shall not My soul be avenged on such a nation as this? A wonderful and horrible thing is committed in the land." (Jer. v. 23-30.)

In a lifetime of fifty-eight years, which has touched almost every extreme of human experience, I have naturally heard a great many public addresses, and a great many sermons; but as I look back over the by-gones, it seems to me that the two which made the deepest imprint on my heart and mind, were made by preachers whose names were never trumpeted by the voice of Fame.

I was fifteen years old, and a village store clerk, at Norwood, when a minister bearing the commonplace name of Smith, held forth in a little school house, on the outskirts of the village, to an audience which probably did not exceed fifty. It was Sunday afternoon, and the meeting was a casual local gathering.

"Pay thy vows to the Most High!" was the text; and the sermon thrilled me, through and through.

It was a huge call to duty, an appeal to men for the sanctity of obligations; a passionate plea for the redemption of those pledges which we make, when we are lifted out of the dull routine of life by some great desire, some great inspiration, some great peril.

In the audience were a few of the soldiers who had followed Lee and Johnston; and to these heroes--all gone now, perhaps--the person turned and said--

"You remember that battlefield in Virginia; you remember the scarred blue ranks that you were about to charge; you remember the awful stillness that came over you, as you thought of the loved ones at home, whom you might never see again; and you remember what you promised God you would do, if you came out of that battle alive.

"You remember just how you felt, when the word came ringing down the line, 'Forward, march!'"

"Pay thy vows to the Most High!"

Very unpretentious was that little schoolhouse, very ordinary the occasion, very obscure the preacher; but I am sure that no better sermon ever shook the dome of the grandest temple reared by man--and the essence of it was, Live up to obligations. Do what you promised to do!

The other was a sermon at Thomson, preached by a man whose life was as pure as crystal, and who, now and then, was lifted into a simple eloquence that moved all who listened.

John M. White was his name--peace to his soul, for he is dead, and I loved him well.

He, too, was speaking of Duty, of the higher path and the old land marks; of the honor that a man should guard, as a woman guards her virtue.

He told of the little ermine of the far North, the tiny creature of the snows, the untailed Diana of the silent woods, that was so true to its instinct for purity, so loyal to the white drapery that God had put around it--that the hunters, seeking its life for its precious fur, put fifth around the burrow where the dainty thing lived; and how this little dumb brute, shrinking from a vile contact which would soil its spotless covering, fell into the hands of its enemies--preferring death to contamination.

Are the old lessons lifeless? Are the old glories gone? Are there no feet that tread the old paths?

Once there were men in Georgia--men who were afraid of nothing, save to do wrong; men who sprang to arms, and went down on a bare question of principle; men who would no more than they would steal; men who flamed into passionate indignation when a legislature was believed to have disgraced itself.

These men; men who caught the fire from the heavens to burn the South; men who carried the Gray lines, and the tattered banner of Union farthest up the heights of Gettysburg; men who, at the battle of Manassas, led the last charge at Appomattox.

These men of old, we feel that something unseen, something better than the human has crept to bed with us, and that while the morning has

"A wonderful and horrible thing is committed in the land."

Everybody whose mind was open to conviction knew that, after a perfectly unbiased jury had patiently heard all the evidence, and all the pleadings, in a trial that lasted nearly a month, a new trial would have been granted to Leo Frank, had Judge Roan, and the Supreme Court been dissatisfied with the verdict.

On the bench, Mr. Rosser had a former partner, but he could not bend Judge Roan to his will.

In the executive office, Mr. Rosser had a present partner, whom he could bend to his will.

When a criminal has money enough to employ lawyers by the score, and engage a firm whose second member is the Governor of the State, that criminal enjoys an advantage heretofore unknown in the annals of America.

What Judge Roan refused, what our Supreme Court refused, and what the Supreme Court of the United States refused, Rosser's gubernatorial partner granted.

Governor Slaton gave Frank a new trial. While in New York he said he would do it, and although his oath of office forbade him to exercise judicial functions, he did that very thing.

He mentally obliterated the jury, wiped out Judge Roan, abolished our Supreme Court, and made himself both trial judge and jury.

He made a personal inspection of the scene of the homicide; he says he studied every part of the evidence; he claims to have tried the case, de novo, as if nothing that had been done bound him in the least.

Hereafter, why should we burden our administrative system with the useless expense of trial judges and juries?

If a criminal can command unlimited money, why shouldn't he be taken before the Executive Department, in the first instance? Why tantalize the Judicial Department with illusions and delusions?

If there was a reasonable doubt as to Frank's guilt, it was the province of the jury to have found it--and such a doubt would have worked an acquittal.

The Governor usurped a power which the Constitution expressly forbids him to exercise, when he re-tried the case, discovered what the jury could not find, and used that alleged doubt as a reason for commutation.

If Slaton had the power to retry the case, and if he found a reasonable doubt, Frank was entitled to a pardon.

After a hue and cry which the Burns Detective Agency, and the Prostitute Press has kept up for more than a year, Governor Slaton turns out to be the dead fly in the ointment, the weak joint in our armor, the vulnerable heel that lets the fatality enter our body politic.

Judge Roan could not be moved; our Supreme Court could not be swayed; the United States Supreme Court could not be stormed; the lowly work people, whose evidence perhaps took the bread out of their mouths, could not be bullied or bribed.

Our system stood, like Jackson at Manassas--it was a stone wall, against which Rosser, Arnold, Burns and the Prostitute Press dashed in vain.

Our Prison Commission was confidently claimed for Frank, and again the attack was repulsed.

At last, one partner got before the other--Rosser before Slaton--and the one partner gave what the other partner wanted.

If there was ever a time when Slaton should have proved his manhood, it was when he was occupying so unobnoxious a position.

Either his firm should have withdrawn from the case, or he should have withdrawn from the firm.

No man whose standards are correct, would have remained both in the law firm and in the executive office; and when Slaton used his official position to liberate a man who had been defeated before every other tribunal, he has no right to expect people to believe that his connection with Rosser had no influence upon his midnight commutation.

People have not forgotten that the Atlanta papers considered the case as a troublesome legacy for Governor Nat Harris.

People have not forgotten how, all of a sudden, the lawyers of Frank got in such a hurry to have the decision come from Washington, and took the unprecedented step of asking the court to hasten the matter.

Why the sudden haste? What was the object of getting the case before Rosser's partner, Slaton?

Why was the United States Supreme Court jogged and hurried? And when was it, that John W. Moore was sent to Massachusetts on the mission to Judge Roan?

The afflicted jurist died a few days before the end of March, this year. Since October, 1914, he was unable to hold a pen. Powerful drugs were administered to give him relief from constant torture. Cancer had eaten away one side of his face; his jaw-bone had to be cut out; he was utterly incapable of connected rational thought and composition.

Who composed that letter which John W. Moore brought from Massachusetts?

Where was it composed? Who heard it read to the dying jurist? Who will swear that he understood it, approved it and ordered his name put to it? Who actually put his name to that letter?

Why was John W. Moore's agency in the matter kept secret? If it was all right, in every way, why so much secrecy and concealment?

Judge Roan told his pastor, the Rev. H. C. Emory, that "according to the evidence Frank was unquestionably guilty," and I doubt whether anybody believes that Judge Roan ever changed his mind--else he would have written to Governor Slaton, and to Mrs. Roan.

There are so many dark places in this phenomenal Frank case! The employment of the infamous scoundrel, William J. Burns, after the Supreme Court had denied Frank a new trial, was suggestive of dirty work intended.

The unparalleled efforts to buy evidence, and to suppress evidence:

The unprecedented campaign of defamation against the State of Georgia:

The manufacture of a national craze in behalf of this peculiarly vile criminal:

The taking of the case into pulpits, magazines and public lectures:

The appeal from the State to the Federal Government;

They Tell us it was Hot Yesterday

In fact we heard numerous persons dilating on the extreme warmth when they entered the sanatorium. We are willing to believe that it was hot, but we know one thing--it was not hot here. We think that a meat shop should be kept cool in the summer and we put our thoughts into action, as those big fans will testify. Our meat stays in the refrigerator and while you are in the shop you stay in the midst of the coolest and most refreshing breeze. Yes, we like to test our own horn; but you see it isn't all hot.

The reputation by Frank's lawyers of the waiver of Frank's presence at the time the verdict was returned—which waiver Judge Roan and Solicitor Dorsey had acted on in good faith, believing that Rosser and Arnold would not go back on their word.

The attempt to get William Smith, the attorney of Conley, to fix the crime on his client:

The suppression of the affidavit made by Frank's cook, and sworn to by her in the presence of her own lawyer.

Frank's base conduct in trying to hang two innocent men:

The refusal of Frank's wife to go about him for three weeks after his rape and murder of the girl:

The abject fear of Frank in refusing to face the negro, when the negro broke down and confessed, telling his own share in that horrible crime, as well as Frank's leading part in it:

The guilty conduct of Frank in taking refuge behind his legal privilege, and refusing to answer a single question—

All these are dark, dark places, but there are others. It was an evil deed, and a deed that courted darkness, when John W. Moore went North to get a statement which Judge Roan would have voluntarily made, long before, had such a change come over his mind.

It was an evil deed, and a deed that courted darkness, when Luther Rosser, after the Prison Commission had acted, motored up a side street, in Atlanta, left his car, and footed it to the home of his partner, and held a midnight conference with him, lasting about two hours and a half.

Slaton and Rosser may say that they never mentioned the Frank case, in that midnight meeting; but an angel from heaven would have to swear it, before people would believe it.

If the one partner wished to see the other, on a matter of legitimate business, there was no need of the side street, no need of the abandoned automobile, and no need of the clandestine character given to the visit.

To the end of time, people will believe that the decision of the Prison Commission had surprised and appalled Frank's mercenaries; and that Rosser went to Slaton in a last desperate effort to defeat the law.

To the end of time, people will remember that, although Slaton was put upon notice of the dirty work which C. W. Burke was doing, the rascally work that Burns was doing, the foul work that Lebon and Tedder were doing, and the use that was being made of Slaton's private office in the progress of the dirty work, he never severed his partnership with Benjamin Phillips, the Jew and Luther Rosser, the pariah of the bar.

Throughout the state, people are speaking of the enormous fee paid to Rosser's firm; and the question naturally arises—Is the fee to be divided among the partners?

God help the State! It is a sickening mess. A trail of slime runs from the Hays Finance Committee to the outer boundaries; and many a Georgian hears a stain on him that he will not outlive.

Jew money has debased us, bought us, and sold us—and laughs at us.

Where, now, is the Georgian who can hold his head up and look the North in the face, when people talk of the Almighty Dollar?

Where, now, is the Georgian whose soul does not surge with shame, and whose eyes are not dimmed with the tears of infinite humiliation?

Bought and sold! Cried off at the auction block and knocked down to Big Money.

Every slander, born in the sordid soul of William J. Burns has been endorsed by Georgia's chief magistrate!

Every black falsehood flung at the twelve honest jurors who fearlessly did their duty, has been endorsed by Georgia's governor. Every villifier of our courts, and our people, and all those who said we condemned Frank on the testimony of a negro, have been vindicated by our Governor.

Those who lampooned us, may now do it, forever, and name Slaton as their witness.

Those who cartooned us, may do it, forever, and name Slaton as their witness.

Those who said that we have one law for the Jew and another for the Gentile, may say it still; and we must be silent.

Those who said that we have one law for the Rich and another for the Poor, may say it still; and we must be dumb.

Before the whole world, we stand ashamed, bitterly conscious of the mire into which we have fallen!

On the heights from which the immortals look down into the lives of human beings, how vast must seem, the moral distance between the little girl who, like the crime of the frozen north, died, rather than soil the purity that God gave her, and the Governor who brought this eternal disgrace upon himself and our State!

She was true; he was not! A child died a heroine's death, and sleeps in a heroine's grave; the man stands naked in shame.

He has not been true; he has not kept his word; he has not lived up to his obligations.

He has been recreant to his trust, and false to his oath of office. He has not paid his vows to the Most High; he has not held above pollution the robes of the State.

We gave him a clean commission; and he returns it to us, covered with filth.

The Constitution which he swore to respect, he has trampled into the mud.

The great Seal of the State has gone, like a thief in the night, to do for an unscrupulous law firm, a deed of darkness which dared not bask in the light of the sun.

For once in our history, a Governor has forsaken the respectable companions of the day, and has been found lurking with the bats, and the owls.

We have been betrayed! The breath of some leprosy monster has passed over us, and we feel like crying out, in horror and despair,—“Unclean! UNCLEAN!”

Mary Phagan's childish hands were up, her arms outstretched, pushing Frank off, when the razor mortis seized her, and left her with those mute witnesses to her fight for her honor.

It was the old negro who put the little hands down, folded them upon her breast, and there they stiffened into position.

So firmly were the hands and arms frozen upon the cold bones, that when Frank took her by the heels, that evening, and dragged her on her side face more than 200 feet over the gritty dirt floor of the basement, the arms remained fixed, “folded across her breast.”

When John M. Slaton tenses on a sleepless bed, in the years to come, he will see a vivid picture of that little Georgia girl, decayed to the metal room by this satyr-faced New York Jew; he will see her little hands put out, to keep off the lustful beast; he will hear her cry of sudden terror; he will see her face purpling as the cruel cord chokes her to death—and John M. Slaton will walk the floor, a wretched, conscience-smitten man, and he will sweat blood!

He will think of those Cantrell boys that he allowed to hang last summer, and those two Georgians will haunt his dreams.

He will think of a telegram that he sent, one year ago, to the Sheriff of Jones county, sending Nick Wilburn to the scaffold. It reads:

Atlanta, Ga., June 11, 1914.

C. E. Roberts, Sheriff Gray county, Ga.:
I have declined to interfere with the sentence of Nick Wilburn. Let the judgment of the court be carried out.
John M. Slaton, Governor.

One law for the rich, and another for the poor!

What Georgians can now deny it?

Mary Phagan, pursued and tempted, and entrapped, and then killed, when she would not do what so many other girls had done—or this Jewish hunter of Gentile girls.

There she lies at Marietta, unavenged by the law!

And her pursuer and murderer, spirited out of Atlanta, unshackled, and taken in his natty new suit and patent leather shoes, on a Pullman palace car, to the State Farm, from which an escape will be arranged for him in less than thirty days!

The Hays Finance Committee and its co-operative organizations do not intend that Frank shall be punished at all, for the rape and murder he committed on the Gentile girl.

In their eyes, she was legitimate prey; and with their Unlimited Money and Invisible Power, they have established the precedent in Georgia, that no Jew shall suffer capital punishment for a crime committed on a Gentile.

In the name of God, what are the people to do, when they wait patiently, two years, for the just sentence of the law to be enforced; and when, after all other shifts and tricks have failed the criminal, one of the partners of a law-firm prostitutes his official position, to save the client of the firm?

Hereafter, let no man reproach the South with Lynch law; let him remember the unendurable provocation; and let him say whether Lynch law is not better than no law at all.

What Rosser and Slaton have together done, nullifies the Code, abolishes the courts, and plunges us into administrative anarchy.

“Amend your ways and your doings!”

Shed not innocent blood!

So are their houses full of deceit; therefore, they are become great, and waxen rich; yea, they overpass the deeds of the wicked; they judge not the cause, the cause of the fatherless.

Yet they prosper!

Shall I not visit for these things, saith the Lord,

Shall not my soul be avenged on such a nation as this?

A wonderful and horrible thing is committed in the land.”

TO WOMEN WHO OVERDO

Thousands of American women in their homes are daily sacrificing their lives to duty. In order to keep the home neat and attractive, the children well dressed and tidy, women overdo. Soon a weakness or displacement is brought on and they suffer in silence, drifting along from bad to worse. For forty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved a boon and a blessing to women in this condition, by restoring their systems to a normal healthy condition. Why don't you try it?

BECAUSE OF HER.

(Ainslie's Magazine.)
With bare brown legs and faded gingham gown,
I saw her first—a lovely little girl,
Her slender fingers clasped within my own,
With low sweet laughter set by heart awirl.
From out her wondrous eyes of darkest blue Shone forth a soul all pure and undivided,
And all things young and beautiful look on An added charm because she was child.

Again I saw her as a maiden grown.
A half-open blossom whose rare grace fulfilled
The promise of the bud, and yet gave hints
Of greater glories, when, if God so willed
The half-grown rose should open to fullest flower,
I brought my gifts of frankincense and myrrh,
To lay them at her feet; and evermore
I revered Womanhood because of Her.

And now I watch her rocking to and fro

And crooning low within the dimming light;
A tiny head is pillowed on her arm,
A tiny form is cuddled warm and tight,
A glow is on her face—a light
me-thinks,
That never on the land or sea
did rest,
All Motherhood is sacred now to me
Because it is my baby at her breast.
—Mabel Stevens Frier.

Origin of June Weddings—

The first people to adopt the month of June as sacred to Hymen, the god of marriage, were the ancient Romans, who considered June the most propitious season of the year for entering upon matrimonial relations. The Romans held that June weddings were likely to be happier than alliances contracted in any other month of the year, especially if the day chosen were that of the full moon. They also held that of all months, May was to be most avoided, as in that month, newlyweds would come under the influence of spirits adverse to happy households. These ancient marriage superstitions were retained by the christians in the Middle Ages and even today June is considered by many to be pre-eminently the month of marriages. The word "wedding" is derived from the ancient Anglo-Saxon "wed" custom. The
"wed" consisted of gifts, including a ring, given by the bridegroom to the bride. At the marriage ceremonies in those times the father of the bride presented the son-in-law with one of his daughter's shoes as a token of the transfer of authority and the bride was struck sharply on the head with the shoe by her new spouse as a reminder that he was her "bom."—Ex-

"PUT PANSIES ON MY GRAVE"

New York Man Leaves $500,000 and Specific Instructions About
Last Resting Place.

Herman zur Lage, whose $500,000 estate is disposed of in a will admitted to probate at Hackensack, N. J., left specific instructions as to the care of his grave and those of his brother and sister.

"In the spring," he directed, "four dozen pansies of the best quality are to be planted on each of the graves, which pansies are to be removed therefrom on the 24th of the following May, when the graves are to be planted in the middle with yellow and red alanthus with a border around the graves and a palm in the center of each grave; all the flowers to be planted closely so that the grave cannot be seen when the flowers are in full bloom.

"When the trees become so large that they interfere with the graves, the trees are to be removed and new trees planted in their place as follows:

"One tree at each corner of the plot, one of them to have red foliage and one to have white foliage. Also to place on each grave several days preceding Thanksgiving day of each year metal wreaths decorated with the best imported artificial flowers of one color; said wreaths to be laid and rest on emels."

BRIDE TAKES WILD PLUNGE

Trousseau and Certificate in Hand,
She Jumps Into Saving Arms of Groom.

With her trousseau in one hand and her marriage certificate in the other, Mrs. Mary Capella, a bride of three days, jumped from the secondstory window of 1003 Annin street when fire threatened her life. Her husband, Anthony Capella, who preceded her in the dangerous leap from the window, and bade her follow, caught his bride when she jumped.
At the result, he is now confined to the home of a friend suffering from painful bruises and probable serious internal injuries. Six other persons in the house, whose lives were endangered, were rescued in a spectacular manner by firemen.

The newly married couple were awakened by the cry of "Fire!" and found their room full of smoke and escape by the stairway cut off by the flames. Unable to raise the window, the bridegroom smashed sash and all away with a chair and then jumped two stories to the pavement below.
He landed without being hurt, and then braced himself to catch his wife.—Philadelphia Record.

HELPING IMMIGRANTS.

In a modern six-story apartment house in New York there is what might be termed a "family club." It was erected by the Educational alliance, which has recently completed its twenty-fifth year, and is intended as a gathering place for the foreign parents, as well as of the American-ized offspring, of the congested East side. Here are classes in domestic art and science, civil service classes, classes for adult immigrants, trade classes, physical training and English. There are concerts and lectures both in English and in Yiddish, and besides this central building conducted by the alliance there are several city branches and two vacation houses, a camp for boys and a seashore cottage for girls.

IN NO MOOD FOR ENTERTAINING.

Mrs. Benham—John, I think there's a man under the bed.
Benham—Well, you talk to him and let me sleep.

PAST HAPPENINGS.

"Talking about the importance of the primaries—"
"Yes, but they are now of secondary importance."

JUST SO.

"Youth will be served."
"But the waiter jumps with greater alacrity for the baldheaded fat man who looks like ready money."

THE DISCOVERY.

"What comes near," cried the timid sheep.
"Tis butt a man," answered the belligerent goat.
